May's grammar school plan just doesn't add up

Budget pledge will only fund 13,000 pupil places – not 70,000

The Treasury has admitted that £320m pledged in the Budget to create thousands of places at Theresa May's flagship grammar schools will only cover a fraction of the cost of setting them up. Officials told The Independent the cash would not be enough to pay for the 70,000 free school places promised by the Prime Minister. An analysis of existing government data shows the money will only deliver 13,000 places by 2020, with money earmarked for the next parliament still only creating just over half of the promised 70,000. Nervous Conservative MPs have now urged the Government to make clear how they will plug the gap.
